Mixed Pairs: One More Chance

Among the participants in the Mixed Pairs on Saturday were, left, Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates, playing with world champion Sharon Osberg, both from the USA, and Antoine Bernheim, president of the Generali Group, playing with Blandine de Heredia, French women's title holder.

The final qualifying session of the Mixed Pairs is scheduled for this morning, and with 182 pairs going through to the final, the players on the edge will have an extra incentive to play well.

The leaders after two qualifying sessions were bunched at the top. In front with 63.00% were Chantal Haemmerli of Switzerland, playing with Italy's Alfredo Versace. Not far behind were Jill Meyers and Zia Mahmood, representing the USA with 62.39%. Right on their heels, only .01% behind them were Danuta Hochecker and Miroslaw Cichoki of Poland.

In fourth place were the German-American duo of Sabine Auken and George Jacobs, with 61.51%.

Defending Mixed Pairs champion Jeff Meckstroth, playing with a new partner this time (Janice Seamon-Molson), is still in contention in 10th place.

The Mixed Pairs attracted 481 pairs.

The entry list for the mixed pairs posted on the Internet at www.ecatsbridge.com is 16 pages long and on every one of those you can find the names of partnerships that might be regarded as potential winners.

So selecting a pair to follow in the opening session is a hap-hazard affair, rather like following one of the co-ordinator's racing tips.

Given that I am typing this introduction at 08.40 you will see that I already have my apologies ready in case my selection, a new partnership from Bulgaria, fails to deliver the goods.

Well, if all the boards looked like this one it would be a very dull tournament. West led a trump solving one of declarer's problems (although it's hard to see how declarer could ever go down on any rational line of play – but see Brian Senior's article!) and declarer won in hand with the eight and played a spade to East's ten. The club switch was ducked to West, and declarer won the trump return in hand, played a spade to the ace, ruffed a spade, ruffed a club and ruffed a spade. West could overruff and play a club but declarer ruffed and had to score a diamond trick for a regulation +110.

When the tray came back to reveal Six Diamonds West was slightly surprised. His decision to advance to a grand slam was based on the premise that East must have a void and if it happened to be in diamonds partner would obviously return to spades.

South tried a hopeful ace of spades, but declarer was soon claiming all the tricks.

Its hard to argue with success, but Six Diamonds looks a little over eager, especially since West might have had considerably more in spades given the bidding.

Another regulation game for East/West saw South lead the three of hearts, second and fourth. North won with the king and returned the suit. Declarer won in dummy and played a club to the jack and king. South switched to ace of diamonds and a diamond and when the clubs proved to be 3-3 declarer cashed out for nine tricks.

East led the seven of spades and declarer took West's queen with the ace. He cashed the ace of hearts, disclosing the 5-0 break, took a second heart and then played a spade to the jack and king. West switched to the queen of clubs and declarer ducked, won the next club and exited with a club to East's king. The switch to the jack of diamonds ran to declarer's queen and he cashed the ace of hearts before exiting with a diamond. West could win and cash a club but then had to play a spade giving declarer the last two tricks and his contract – and a very good score.

Not an outstanding set of results for North/South, but to use a football metaphor it was early days and they were over average by the end of the session.

La sottoapertura di 2♥ in Ovest mostrerebbe, per sistema, una monocolora a cuori. E' un modo come un altro per dire che si e' presenti al tavolo, che non si e' rimasti in albergo. Come alternativa si potrebbe starnutire. Scherzo, diciamo che e' una sottoapertura un po' aggressiva. La giusta decisione della coppia italiana, 3SA al posto di 4♠, e' gia' premiata dalle 11 prese a disposizione dei due contratti, ma non bisogna accontentarsi e cambiare board. Prima tocca giocare. L'attacco 9 di cuori e' stato coperto da tutti (e forse Ovest poteva astenersi). Dopo 5 colpi a picche Duboin e' arrivato qui.

Sembrerebbe una mano da 10 prese, e l'analista conferma. Ma c'e' un rischio. Se in Nord decidete di attaccare fiori, per esempio, rischiate di regalare l'undicesima. Perche' il 10 di fiori gira fino al Fante, 3 colpi di cuori, Asso di fiori, fiori impasse al 9 di Nord e si cede una quadri e una picche. Duboin ha attaccato fiori. 4♥ + 1? No, perche' ha scelto il 4 di fiori e non il 10. 4♥ mi.

Practice Makes Perfect

The last time Zia Mahmood and Jill Meyers played together in a big tournament, it was for practice in advance of their entry in the World Mixed Pairs in Verona. The result was a win in the Bobby Nail Life Master Pairs.

They started off well in the opening qualifying session of the Mixed Pairs with a solid 61% effort. On the following board, the second of the day, Zia worked a bit of his hocus pocus (albeit with the help of the opponents) to emerge with two extra overtricks.

It's easy to see that a club slam is easy to play. Bidding slam is another matter.

The opening lead was the ♠9, which went to the queen and ace. Ordinary players might unblock the ♥K then run clubs, hoping that something good would happen at the end.

Not Zia. He started on clubs immediately, giving the opponents unaccountable discarding problems. With three discards to make on dummy's club suit, Zia tossed the ♠3, then the ♠J, followed by the ♦5. East discarded a couple of hearts (West did, too, plus the ♦Q at one point). After running clubs, Zia overtook dummy's ♥K with the ace, and when the jack fell under the ♥Q, cashed two more tricks in that suit. East, clinging to her diamond stopper, let go all of her spades, and in the end Zia produced the ♦A and the good ♠7 for 13 tricks and most of the matchpoints.

On the next deal, Meyers had to make a decision at trick one – and she did the right thing.

Zia started off with a low club. Meyers considered whether to play the ace or to insert the 10. After a brief study, during which she eyed the ominous-looking heart suit in dummy, Meyers played the ace – a good move as it turned out. Had she inserted the 10, declarer would have taken all the tricks, thanks to the successful heart finesse. The spade finesse obviously works, but declarer wouldn't have had to take it – there's a showup squeeze in the end if declarer cashes red-suit tricks in the proper order.

Boards 15 and 16 produced consecutive grand slams for North-South, but Zia and Meyers bid only one of them. They made up for one of the missed slams with excellent defense on the following deal.

This was not the best contract – certainly not for game – and declarer did not find the best line of play to minimize the damage. Zia and Meyers took full advantage.

The opening lead of the ♣Q was covered by the king and ace, ruffed, and declarer took a spade finesse at trick two. Zia won the ♠K, considered his next play for a moment, and returned a low heart to the 3, 10 and ace.

Declarer then ruffed a club, played a spade to the ace and ruffed dummy's last club, then put the ♦K on the table. Meyers won the ♦A and exited with the ♥Q. The ♥K was declarer's last trick. Zia ruffed the diamond continuation, pulled dummy's last trump with the 8 and played a club to Meyers' hand. That was four down for plus 200 and most of the matchpoints.

Zia and Meyers shone on defense again two boards later.

Meyers hit on the opening lead of the ♥Q, which held. The ♥J followed, and it, too, was a winner. Concerned at this point mostly with overtricks – or the chance for a plus should Zia get in somehow – exited with the ♦K, which produced an unexpected bonus. Declarer took the ♦A and ran the ♠10 to Zia's queen. He returned his last heart to Meyers' ace, and she cashed the ♦Q, following with the ♦9, which Zia overtook. The ♦10 was the seventh trick for the defenders, earning Plus 300 when they might have been Minus 650 in defense against 4♠.

Session I

Qualifying Mixed Pairs

by Brian Senior

With several hundred pairs to choose from, it was a matter of luck as much as anything whether we would choose the tables at which something newsworthy happens. Of course, the beauty of matchpointed pairs is that every board is equally important, so that there is rarely a completely dull deal. I started by watching a few deals featuring the top Israeli pair. Migry Zur-Campanile and Michael Barel, then went to watch the same deals at the table featuring French pair Alain and Anne-Frederique Levy.

After cashing a diamond, East needs to find the spade switch to prevent declarer from establishing both minor-suit winners in time to get rid of both spade losers. A spade at trick two and a second round when the defence is next on lead means one down.

Two identical auctions saw the North players declare 3♥, a contract which is easily beaten double dummy but not so easily in real life.

Iman Assassa of Germany led a top diamond then switched to the two of clubs. Michael Fernolend thought about that for a while then went up with the ace and switched to a spade. Too late! Barel won in hand and cashed the top hearts then played the ♦Q to East's king. He won the spade return in dummy and threw his remaining spades on the ♣Q and ♦J; +140.

Argentina's Ammarita Rosetta also cashed the ace of diamonds and switched to a club, the six. Alejandro Bianchedi ducked that so the bare king won. Alain Levy cashed three rounds of hearts then played the ♦Q to the king. He played the jack on the diamond return and that was ruffed. Levy threw a spade and had one more spade to lose at the end; also +140.

Fernolend did not have an opening bid in his methods so it was left to Barel to open the North hand. Migry Zur-Campanile responded 3NT, normally 3-3-(4-3), and Barel judged to play there. With the same number of tricks available in spades and in no trump, that is the key to a decent matchpoint score. Alas, declarer established an eleventh trick then had a physical slip-up and pulled a wrong card, holding her to ten tricks; +430 These morning starts!

Bianchedi did have an opening bid available and used it, 2♥ promising five hearts plus a four-card or longer minor. Levy overcalled 2NT and was raised to game. Rosetta led the nine of hearts to dummy's queen, ducked. Levy cashed all the spades then ducked a club, won the diamond return and cashed his winners, then led the ♦10 at trick twelve and West had to concede the last trick to dummy's ♦Q; +460 and a good score for North/South.

Barel opened the borderline North hand and was soon putting down dummy in 2♥. Alfredo Versace led a spade, ducked to the ten, and Chantal Haemmerli switched to a low club. Declarer ducked that to Versace's nine and back came a second spade. Zur-Campanile won dummy's ace and played the jack of diamonds, which was covered all around. Now Versace switched back to clubs, the queen forcing the ace. Knowing the trump position, it is possible to get home from here by playing the suit, but declarer did not have that information available to her and instead ruffed a club, ruffed a spade, played a diamond to the ten, and led dummy's last spade. When West followed to the spade, declarer tried throwing away her last diamond, but East did likewise and a diamond over-ruff meant that the contract was one down for -50.

The North hand would be passed by the majority of French players, I suspect, and that was Levy's choice. Nobody else had anything to say either.

I shall be interested to see how many pairs got to the cold grand slam. Seven Diamonds is cold if the trumps break two-one or the club is onside, yet getting to 6♦ is clearly not a trivial task and will no doubt have scored well.

Migry Zur-Campanile, Israel

Versace's 2♣ opening was his side's second-strongest opening, not quite game-forcing. Two Diamonds was a relay and 2♠ showed at least eight or nine playing tricks with a spade suit, forcing for one round. When Haemmerli showed her diamond suit, Versace raised, but Haemmerli's only outside control was a shortage in her partner's main suit, so that she had no convenient cuebid. Haemmerli just raised herself to game and chalked up an inadequate +640.

The Czech Republic's Milos Bahník opened with a strong 1♣ and rebid 2♠, forcing, over the negative response. When Anna Krausová showed her diamonds, Bahník had to make a committal decision whether to bypass 3NT in search of a diamond slam, or settle for the highest scoring game with what was an essentially balanced hand. He elected to go quietly, and 3NT ended the auction. Again, West was discouraged by her spade shortage facing known strength. Bahník won the heart lead, cashed the second heart and ran the diamonds. He cashed the queen and jack of hearts then led the queen of clubs to tempt a cover. When Anne-Frederique played low, Bahník thought for a while, but then got it right by playing the jack, so had twelve tricks for +690.

Bryan Maksymetz did not open the West hand. When Sara Sivelind opened 1♥ he used Drury then respected his partner's weak rebid, so that the fair game had been reached. However, Barel had a normal enough balancing double and now Sivelind took the opportunity to introduce her club suit to help partner to judge – it was clear that North/South would find a satisfactory spade fit. Maksymetz had both a fourth trump and a good club holding so jumped to game.

Zur-Campanile led a trump, which Sivelind won in hand. She started with the king of clubs and a second club to the queen and ace. Now she drew trumps and played a diamond to the queen and ace. There was only one trump left in dummy and two minor-suit losers to be ruffed, so Sivelind had to concede a spade and a diamond; ten tricks for +420.

Canada's Douglas Fraser opened INT, 11-14, and Sandra Fraser used Stayman then raised the 2♥ response to game. Levy found the costly lead of the ten of clubs, which ran to the jack. Fraser played a heart to dummy then a diamond to the queen and ace. He won the diamond return with the king, drew trumps and gave up a spade. Anne-Frederique won the ♠A and played the jack of diamonds. Fraser ruffed, ruffed a spade and picked up the clubs with a third-round finesse against the nine; 11 tricks for an excellent +450.

The Frasers got to 3NT and Anne-Frederique led a low diamond to dummy's bare king. When Sandra took the club finesse, Anne-Frederique won the king and switched to a heart for the jack and king. Alain switched back to diamonds but declarer could simply cover and had a second diamond stopper; nine tricks for +400.

Maksymetz rebid 2♣, which could have been various hands, then showed a strong hand with his 3♥ bid over the 2♦ relay. Sivelind raised to game, hoping to find him with a four-card suit, but the four-three fit played very nicely. Barel led a club to the king and Zur-Campanile cashed the ace of diamonds then reverted to clubs, Maksymetz winning dummy's ace. He cashed the queen of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, played three rounds of spades, ruffing, then cashed the jack of clubs and ruffed the last diamond. There was just the heart king to lose; +420 and a lot of matchpoints for East/West.

Warming up in Verona

By Barry Rigal

The first session of the pairs is often rather akin to a crap shoot. Everyone needs to warm up – our first deal was no exception. I was playing with Sue Picus.

We sold out to 3♦ after the auction Pass – 1♦ – 2♣ – Pass; 2♦ – 3♦ – All Pass. We deserved a zero for this of course but actually got close to average. Why? Well, if South bids 3♠ over 3♦ and plays 4♠ it looks natural for East to win the diamond lead and continue the suit. If declarer ruffs low (hardly unreasonable), West overruffs and leads a heart through; down one.

Declarer can succeed – I'm not going to go as far as to say that he should.... At trick two declarer ruffs high, draws two rounds of trumps and clears the clubs. West can win and lead a heart through, retaining the master trump for the gain of tempo – but it does him no good. Declarer wins the ♥A and runs the clubs; West can ruff in when he likes but all the hearts have gone from dummy and declarer has the rest.

Like pretty much the whole field, I played 3NT from the North seat on a low heart lead (whether it was attitude or fourth highest, pretty much the same inferences were available). The correct route in 3NT is far from clear: Peter Fredin, for example, went for all the marbles by going up with the queen – once this was covered he was dead in the water (or he had lost his marbles I suppose).

By contrast, I was still in the game when I ducked the trick and took the nine with the ace. A diamond to the king held as East gave Smith to encourage the lead (but whether this was because he did not want a shift, or had ♥J 10 9 or his actual holding, I did not know). I'm sure it must be right to cash off the clubs and find out a bit more about what was going on, or even to play spades now – as the cards lie you make the contract easily enough. But I pressed on with diamonds; East took the ♦A and played a low heart. I misguessed and was back to down two; 32% was rather more than I deserved.

The field played 2♠ here. The only lead, at double dummy, to hold that contract to eight tricks is a trump. Declarer cannot manage more than four trumps, two hearts, and two clubs. At our table, on repeated diamond leads, I overtook and continued with a low diamond. When declarer pitched a club Sue could ruff and return a trump to ensure the defence took five tricks.

Elisabeth Ettlinger did far better when at her table North ducked the second diamond. South chose to return a low heart. Elisabeth overtook the jack, to finesse in clubs and then ruff a club to hand. The ♥A and a heart ruff followed by a club ruff with the ♠A saw declarer ruff a heart with the ♠Q, her eighth trick. She was now down to ♠J 9 8, and when she led a diamond from dummy North cooperated by ruffing in with the ♠10 – and that was her tenth trick.

(Incidentally, a low trump at trick four would not have been good enough to hold declarer to eight tricks – declarer can win in hand and play a low heart. South can win and play back a spade, but declarer wins in dummy and ruffs a diamond. If South overruffs with the king, declarer can set up a long diamond, so he pitches a club. South cashes the spade ace, heart ace, then plays three rounds of clubs ruffing in hand – South can overruff but is endplayed in hearts.)

Some boards are just too difficult for regular mortals.... Can standard bidding get you close to 7♦ here? Our opponents had the sequence shown above... East, who had denied an ace facing a game-forcing 2♣ opening bid, was perhaps closer to most in getting to slam, in terms of the fact that her partner could have bid 5♦ over 3♦ with no slam interest. Given the sixth diamond and the honours in both side-suits, it was surprising that she contented herself with a slow raise to 5♦ and her partner could do no more, giving us a 90% board for Minus 640. A lot of the field played 3NT – making 12 tricks was worth 40%.

A bloodthirsty auction saw East declare 3♦, in what turned out to be a surprisingly healthy spot on a heart lead (a trump lead leaves declarer scrambling for down one). Correct play on a heart lead is to ruff, cross to the ♣K to ruff another heart, then lead the ♠K from the board. North wins and can do no better than play a trump. Declarer puts in the ♦10, forcing the ♦K and ♦A, then plays ♠Q and ruffs a spade, ruffs another heart and now ruffs a spade with the ♦J to lead another trump. With the ♥J high in hand, all the defence can score is two trump tricks, a club, and a spade.

As we know so well, it is better to be lucky than good. At our table declarer ruffed the heart lead, then crossed to the club king to lead a spade up. I won and played a trump. And now eight tricks were the limit (and declarer fell from grace and ended up with only seven).

Championship Diary Day 2

As the opening ceremony gets under way we are minus the services of the World's greatest bridge photographer, but although we still have no idea where he is, Tacchi arrives in the nick of time! (He was delayed by the closure of the Swiss tunnels – a fact of which his satellite navigation system was not aware.)

Having mentioned the fact that several people had reached Verona without their luggage, I can't resist reporting that Brian Senior managed to lose his wife Nevena en route! They flew via Frankfurt, but the allure of the shops meant that he found himself sitting alone on the plane. Forced to make a decision, when advised that either he got off or the plane took off, he naturally...flew on to Verona! (Nevena completed her journey on a train via Milan – they have some decent shops there too!)

Irena Chodorowska was working hard at the Registration desk. The necessary paperwork having been completed she politely enquired 'How are you to pay?' 'I'm fine, thank you!' was the reply.

tori, tecnici e responsabili federali e di club con la partecipazione di Toni Mortarotti.

presentazione PER TUTTI con la partecipazione
di Philippe Cronier, Gilles Cohen, Marina Causa,
Toni Mortarotti

Dall'inizio del 2007, i bridgisti francesi ed italiani inizialmente, poi quelli del mondo intero, potranno testare le loro competenze nel bridge scegliendo di passare dei test in centri di certificazione la cui lista sarà resa pubblica e nota a tutti.

Questi test saranno destinati a tutti, dal principiante al campione. In questo modo ciascuno potrà compararsi a tutti gli altri bridgisti del mondo nei 7 domini di competenze tecniche e nei numerosi domini psicotecniche. Ciascuno potrà così conoscere il proprio livello, migliorare i suoi punti deboli, e misurare i suoi progressi passando sempre nuovi test.

Competenze tecniche e competenze psicotecniche

Per passare un test PLAY BRIDGE, i giocatori potranno scegliere tra tre categorie di test, ciascuna che fa riferimento a due o tre competenze tecniche. Per contro, le competenze psicotecniche saranno sistematicamente valutate, qualunque sia la categoria di test scelto.

1. Test sulle dichiarazioni
2. Test sul gioco d'attacco
3. Test sul gioco di difesa

Competenze psicotecniche

- a) Gestione del tempo
- b) Gestione dello stress
- c) Memorizzazione
- d) Concentrazione
- e) Qualità come partner
- f) Strategia
